LECTURES

The Future of the Past at Herculaneum

Thursday, June 27, 2019, at 7:30 pm

The Getty Villa, Auditorium

Free | Advance ticket required

Francesco Sirano, director of the Archaeological Park of Herculaneum, discusses the past, present, and future of the site buried by the eruption of Mt. Vesuvius in AD 79. Excavated since 1738, a decade before nearby Pompeii, Herculaneum presents challenges and opportunities different from its more famous neighbor. Sirano addresses exciting new finds, conservation issues, and recent efforts to boost public awareness and engagement.

This lecture complements the exhibition Buried by Vesuvius: Treasures from the Villa dei Papiri, which will be open before and after the lecture. It is presented in collaboration with the Italian Cultural Institute, Los Angeles.

Francesco Sirano is an archaeologist and the director of the Parco Archeologico di Ercolano. His extensive museum management experience was honed at the Museo Archeologico e Teatro dell'antica Teanum Sidicinum, the Museo Archeologico antica Allifae, the Museo Archeologico e Circuito siti dell'Antica Capua, and the Parchi Archeologici di Baia e Cuma. Among his many research interests are Greco-Roman archaeology, the study of the image, and material culture.

Bacchus Uncorked: Drinking and Thinking

Saturday, July 13, 2019, from 5:30 pm - 8:30 pm

The Getty Villa

Advance ticket required

Luxury Roman villas offered the leisure to discuss important topics—such as leading a good life—over wine. The library of the Villa dei Papiri contained books by the Epicurean philosopher Philodemus, who promoted a life of pleasure through moderation. Learn about the enduring relevance of Epicurean ideas from philosopher-classicist Timothy O’Keefe, then enjoy wine curated by wine educator Diego Meraviglia and conversation with fun-loving philosophers amid the Villa’s beautiful architecture and gardens.

Tickets: $75, includes wine and appetizers; complimentary parking. 21 and over.

This program is inspired by the Villa dei Papiri, the ancient model for the Getty Villa and the subject of the exhibition Buried by Vesuvius: Treasures from the Villa dei Papiri opening June 26.

Timothy O’Keefe is an associate professor of philosophy at Georgia State University in Atlanta. His research interests are in Greek and Roman philosophy with a particular interest in Hellenistic philosophy and Epicurus. He has written extensively on these subjects and is the author of Epicureanism (2009) and Epicurus on Freedom (2005). When not teaching, reading, and writing, O’Keefe enjoys hiking, camping, biking, home brewing, and being a news junkie.

Bacchus Uncorked: Wine and the Senses

Saturday, July 27, 2019, from 5:30 pm - 8:30 pm

The Getty Villa

Advance ticket required

The owner of the luxurious Villa dei Papiri at Herculaneum collected the works of Epicurian philosopher Philodemus. Epicureans believed that we should savor the moment and be content with simple pleasures. Join philosopher Barry Smith for a sensory experience inspired by an Epicurean view of life in a Roman villa. Smith engages the mind and senses in a talk that bridges ancient philosophy and modern neuroscience, then leads a wine tasting with wine educator Diego Meraviglia. Enjoy a summer’s evening discovering art, sipping wine, and enjoying the scents and sounds of the Villa’s garden spaces.

Tickets: $75, includes wine and appetizers; complimentary parking. 21 and over.

This program is inspired by the exhibition Buried by Vesuvius: Treasures from the Villa dei Papiri opening June 26. Generous support provided by the J. Paul Getty Museum’s Villa Council.

Barry C. Smith is director of the Institute of Philosophy at the University of London’s School of Advanced Study. He is also the founding director of the Center for the Study of the Senses, which pioneers collaborative links between philosophers, psychologists and neuroscientists. He is a philosopher of mind and language and his current research is on the multisensory interactions between flavor, taste and smell. He served as editor of Questions of Taste: The Philosophy of Wine (2007) and is a frequent contributor to The World of Fine Wine and the wine columnist for Prospect magazine.

Bacchus Uncorked: Villas and Vineyards

Saturday, August 3, 2019, from 5:30 pm - 8:30 pm

The Getty Villa

Advance ticket required

Wine and beautiful surroundings went hand in hand in ancient Roman villas. The area of Mt. Vesuvius inspired elite Romans to build lovely homes near the coast and grow grapevines in the rich volcanic soil. Learn from classical archaeologist Steven Tuck about villa life, the association of villas with producing and drinking wine, and the clever ways architecture and decor delighted the eye and inspired conversation. Then sip on a selection of Italian wines curated by wine educator Diego Meraviglia while enjoying the Villa's garden peristyle with its sculpture, painted walls, and flora.

Tickets: $75, includes wine and appetizers; complimentary parking. 21 and over.

This program is inspired by the exhibition Buried by Vesuvius: Treasures from the Villa dei Papi opening June 26.

Steven L. Tuck is professor of Classics at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio. After earning his B.A. in history and Classics at Indiana University, Tuck received his Ph.D. in Classical art and archaeology from the University of Michigan. He has conducted archaeological fieldwork and research in Italy, Greece, England, and Egypt, and has directed more than a dozen study tours in Italy, concentrated on the city of Rome and the area around the Bay of Naples. He has written widely on subjects related to Roman art and civilization, presented dozens of public lectures across the U.S., and received numerous teaching awards.
