

The J. Paul Getty Trust
Communications Department

1200 Getty Center Drive, Suite 403
Los Angeles, California 90049-1681
www.getty.edu

Tel 310 440 7360
Fax 310 440 7722
communications@getty.edu

NEWS FROM THE GETTY

DATE: January 18, 2012
FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Dancing Peasant Couple, 1525. Urs Graf (Swiss, about 1485–1527). Pen and gray and black ink; pricked for transfer (recto). The J. Paul Getty Museum, Los Angeles.

GERMAN AND SWISS MASTERS FEATURED IN NEWEST DRAWINGS AT THE J. PAUL GETTY MUSEUM

Exhibition includes rare works by Hans Holbein the Younger and Albrecht Dürer, amongst others

Renaissance Drawings from Germany and Switzerland, 1470–1600

At the J. Paul Getty Museum, Getty Center

March 27–June 17, 2012

LOS ANGELES— Renaissance Drawings from Germany and Switzerland, 1470–1600, an exhibition that explores vibrant masterpieces of the German Renaissance, will be on view at the J. Paul Getty Museum, Getty Center, from March 27 to June 17, 2012. The 43 objects have been selected from the Getty Museum's celebrated permanent collection of drawings, and they illuminate an age that elevated draftsmanship to new heights of achievement.

The Renaissance in German-speaking lands, which included present-day Germany, Switzerland and parts of France, was one of the greatest periods in the history of northern European drawing. The exhibition includes masterpieces by masters such as Albrecht Dürer, Hans Holbein the Younger, Martin Schongauer and Lucas Cranach the Elder.

The Virtuosity of Line

In the 1500s, Swiss and German draftsmen began to explore the aesthetic beauty of line for its own sake, developing individualistic and expressive linear vocabularies that included swells, tapers, and flourishes. The "cult of line" stressed technical virtuosity, dynamism, and precision. A master of this period was Urs Graf, a Swiss graphic artist specializing in scenes of violence and eroticism. In Dancing Peasant Couple, he depicts a man and woman engaged in a lewd and raucous dance. The razor sharpness of his black ink lines is echoed in his insignia of a Swiss dagger, deftly sketched at the bottom of the sheet.

"What is impressive is the almost athletic way these artists used the pen to make flourishes and sprawling lines," says Lee Hendrix, senior curator of drawings at the J. Paul Getty Museum. "They were masters of the quill pen, and drew the human form with great animation and contagious energy."

The exhibition includes two works by Albrecht Dürer, the most famous German artist of the era. As a young artist, Dürer traveled to Italy on a quest to absorb the art of the Italian Renaissance. Accordingly, he was the first German artist to master human anatomy and the depiction of the nude figure. In The Good Thief, he applies these lessons to render convincingly both the weight of the thief's body on the cross and the musculature of his nude body through rhythmic clusters of cross hatched lines.

Rarities and Masterpieces

The exhibition features drawings by many artists whose work is rarely seen outside of Europe, and includes favorite subject matter of the period such as peasant life, mercenary soldiers, and courtly figures of love and pageantry. One of the most significant pieces in the exhibition is the drawing of a rotund scholar or cleric by Hans Holbein the Younger—the only such portrait drawing by Holbein in the United States.

"Holbein's drawings of the members of the court of King Henry VIII are primarily held in the collection of Queen Elizabeth II, and have been in the Royal Collection for centuries," adds Hendrix. "Much of our visual understanding of this period in British history and of the Tudor court is filtered through Holbein's eyes, and this portrait depicts an individual with such realism and weight that he steps out of the centuries and into our presence."

Portrait of a Scholar or Cleric, 1532–35. Hans Holbein the Younger (German, 1497/1498–1543). Black and red chalk, pen and brush and black ink, on pink prepared paper. The J. Paul Getty Museum, Los Angeles.

Drawing Flourishes in All Media

Artists of the period, however famous, did not limit themselves to drawing for paintings or prints, but also made designs for applied art. Although sometimes an end in itself, drawing was also the basis for elaborate and beautiful metalwork, jewels, sculpture, and stained glass. This required fine detailing that gave precise instruction to the craftsmen who translated the drawing into another medium. Even Dürer was no exception, as his Signet-Ring Design offers the patron two options for a coat-of-arms: a demi-fleur-de-lis on the left and demi-rose on the right.

Renaissance Drawings from Germany and Switzerland, 1470–1600 will go on view March 27 through June 17, 2012 in the West Pavilion of the J. Paul Getty Museum at the Getty Center.

#

MEDIA CONTACT: Alexandria Sivak
Getty Communications
(310) 440-6473
asivak@getty.edu

The J. Paul Getty Trust is an international cultural and philanthropic institution devoted to the visual arts that includes the J. Paul Getty Museum, the Getty Research Institute, the Getty Conservation Institute, and the Getty Foundation. The J. Paul Getty Trust and Getty programs serve a varied audience from two locations: the Getty Center in Los Angeles and the Getty Villa in Malibu.

The J. Paul Getty Museum collects in seven distinct areas, including Greek and Roman antiquities, European paintings, drawings, manuscripts, sculpture and decorative arts, and photographs gathered internationally. The Museum's mission is to make the collection meaningful and attractive to a broad audience by presenting and interpreting the works of art through educational programs, special exhibitions, publications, conservation, and research.

Visiting the Getty Center

The Getty Center is open Tuesday through Friday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. It is closed Monday and major holidays. Admission to the Getty Center is always free. Parking is $15 per car, but reduced to $10 after 5pm on Saturdays and for evening events throughout the week. No reservation is required for parking or general admission. Reservations are required for event seating and groups of 15 or more. Please call (310) 440-7300 (English or Spanish) for reservations and information. The TTY line for callers who are deaf or hearing impaired is (310) 440-7305. The Getty Center is at 1200 Getty Center Drive, Los Angeles, California

-more-

Additional information is available at www.getty.edu.

Sign up for e-Getty at www.getty.edu/subscribe to receive free monthly highlights of events at the Getty Center and the Getty Villa via e-mail, or visit www.getty.edu for a complete calendar of public programs.